

Inspired by the incredible flavors served at traditional Japanese festivals, Happy House was founded on the belief that dining out should be happy and festive. Happy House's founders thought that quick-service restaurants had become predictable and boring, so they set out to expand and upgrade fast food options by offering fresh meals to order and one-of-a-kind teriyaki sauces.

The first Happy House restaurant opened in San Jose's historic Japantown district in 1976, where its fresh take on fast food was an instant sensation. Over the years, Happy House has grown its distinctive menu while maintaining a commitment to using fresh ingredients delivered daily and food that's grilled to order—never held under heat lamps or served up from a steam table.

Today, Happy House has six locations throughout the Silicon Valley. Bay Area folks can pop into the casual eatery for a tasty bite or grab a jumbo-sized Happy Pak with enough chicken salad, rice, and flame broiled teriyaki to feed the whole gang at home. Must-try items include bone-in teriyaki chicken, Asian chicken salad, and homemade teriyaki sauces in original and spicy flavors, which are available by the bottle.
